OREGLIA MAY BE LEO'S SUCCESSOR

Talk in the Vatican Concerning the Next Pope.

PRESENT PONTIFF'S HEALTH

Chances of a New Incumbent Making Important Changes.

Land the Donor Did Not Own.

Rome, Dec. 15.-The question who and what the next Pope will be is the staple of Vatican conversation at present. Lee will be ninety in March and he is subject to fainting fits which bode no mponents of the Sacred College and to study their leanings both political and religious, their chances of succeeding to the chair of St. Peter and even their state of health. It is owing to this the recent dangerous illness of Cardinal Oreglia excited so much attention. He was suffering from pneumonta, and is sev-enty years old. He is now said to be re-

Oregina is reported to have said before his illness: "If ever I am elected Pope, I'il make a clean sweep of the Vatican," alluding probably to Rampolla and Mocenni, who live in the apostolic palace and are Leo's confidants.

The Dal-tons are inspectors in the New York Vol-unteer Life Saving Corps, and they were accompanied by many friends, who expected to see them carry off the lion's share of the prizes offered, which con-sisted of pieces of silverware. There was considerable preliminary work by the quartet, the men receiving a massage and thorough rub with fish oil, which was expected to ward off the effect of the intense chill of the water. Attired in the thinnest of abbreviated costumes, the men made their way to the start, under the fire of such witticisms "You're not so warm," "Do you want y ice?" etc. But little time was lost waiting for the word, and the four dived as one man.

Donaldson almost immediately took the lead and with a strong trudgeon stroke was some distance ahead at twenty-live yards. Stabler, directly he struck the water, concluded he had business claes where, and broke all records getting out and back to the dressing room. The Daltons in the meanwhile were having a great struggle for place honors. At half way Donaldson mantained his advantage but the pace was commencing to tell. At seventy-live yards his opponents were slowly, but surely gaining. So well did the captain do that at the finish Donaldson just received the verdict by an arm's length, Frank Dalton several yards back.

None of the men would accept the profered use of overcoats, and each declared himself to be feeling all right. In the E.
